

AHRC funding in Modern Languages at the University of St Andrews

The School of Modern Languages at the University of St. Andrews warmly invites applications to the Scottish Graduate School for Arts & Humanities AHRC DTP studentship competition for 2023 entry. Successful applicants will receive home tuition fees and stipend at UKRI rates (£4,596 and £ 17,668 in 2022-23.) Full details are available on the SGSAH website.

How to Apply:

We welcome PhD applications in a wide range of research areas across our seven language departments (Arabic & Persian, Chinese, French, German, Italian, Russian and Spanish) and Comparative Literature programme. We encourage you first to make contact with a potential supervisor within the School of Modern Languages, prior to applying. The application process involves several stages and we recommend that you contact us as early as possible to discuss your ideas.

Applicants to SGSAH must be nominated by their host institution.

To be considered for SGSAH/AHRC funding you must apply to the University of St Andrews by submitting the research application form before 5pm on 25 November 2022.

Please note this very early deadline

To facilitate our nomination process, we also ask you to complete the SGSAH pre-selection template available from the School of Modern Languages (modlangs@st-andrews.ac.uk) and submit it to us by the above date.

The School is also delighted to offer a range of other scholarship opportunities to support doctoral research including fee waivers.

Any general questions can be addressed to Professor Derek Duncan, Director of Postgraduate Research in the School of Modern Languages (langsdocgr@st-andrews.ac.uk).
