SPRINGER NATURE

Springer

Series Editors:
Marianna Charountaki, Daniela Irrera

Non-State Actors in International Relations

Call for Volume Proposals

The Westphalian state was once the unchallenged organising principle of international life. That consensus has fractured. At the beginning of the 20th century, new and different actors emerged, imposing their requirements in the international arena and demanding to be involved. With increasing globalisation, the erosion of borders, and weakening of traditional political norms and powers, the role of NSAs continues to grow—and so does the need to conceptualise and study them.

Non-State Actors in International Relations offers a broad outlet to scholars working across a variety of policy fields and theoretical perspectives.

The Series invites proposals for monographs and contributed volumes on:

- Actor types — including but not limited to NGOs, multinational corporations, international organisations, armed non-state actors, transnational movements, and diaspora networks
- Policy fields — such as security, trade, human rights, environmental governance, development, migration, and health
- Theoretical perspectives — constructivist, liberal, realist, critical, and beyond
- Empirical or conceptual approaches — case studies, comparative analyses, and theory-building contributions are all in scope

Submit a Proposal

Your book belongs in a focused, actively growing series—dedicated to one of the most dynamic areas of contemporary IR scholarship and backed by Springer's global distribution and discoverability. You get placement alongside cutting-edge work, curated by leading voices in the field.

Contact the series editors directly to discuss book ideas:
Marianna Charountaki MCharountaki@lincoln.ac.uk
Daniela Irrera daniela.irrera@unicasd.it

Find more information on the series homepage

link.springer.com/series/16711

For publishing enquiries, contact your Springer editor:
lorraine.klimowich@springer.com